FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

The 82d "All American" Airborne Division

BY MAJ. GEN. F. W. FARRELL, USA Commanding

THE 82d Airborne Division has been stationed at Fort Bragg, North Carolina since its return to the United States in 1946.

The Division today is a far cry from the 82d which returned to the U. S. in late '45.

Maj. Gen. Farrell

Gliders have given way to parachutes. Much organic transportation has been added. Strengths of units have been increased. The fire power and shock action of two tank battalions add to the combat punch of the Airborne. Improved heavy drop parachute techniques now make it possible for the airborne combat teams to drop complete with supporting arms, except tanks.

Under the leadership of such men as General Omar N. Bradley, General Matthew B. Ridgway and General James M. Gavin, the 82d achieved a reputation that is hard to excel. General J. Lawton Collins said of the Division: "I can assure you that the 82d can take on anything, anywhere, anytime that it is called upon to fight."

Today we in the 82d are doing our best to maintain the high standards of those who have served before us. Training is rigorous and continuous. If we are to be prepared to fight "anything, anywhere, anytime," then we must always be at peak efficiency.

Although the Division has sat out the Korean action so far, it made contributions of cadre and replacements to the fighting units there. Today many officers and troopers who left to fight in Korea have returned to form a hard core of combat-experienced veterans who know how to give the best practical instruction. Theirs is the task of giving advanced (Please turn to Page 497)

AF Disturbed Over Pilot Tng. Shortage

Given the go-ahead for accelerated wing strength expansion in the New Look, the Air Force is seriously concerned over the problem of obtaining adequate numbers of pilots.

That's a major reason why Air Force leaders are so anxious for action to raise the attractiveness of military service. Among other factors mentioned prominently in the Womble Report as being harmful to career incentives are uncertainty about and reductions in flying pay.

The Army, like the Air Force, has been required to put on a concerted campaign to obtain enough volunteers for flying training to fill billets in its expanding aviation program.

Highlighting the pilot problem with which the Air Force must contend was the disclosure this week that, unless there's a late upward trend, the February quota for trainees will not be met.

This shortage is likely despite the fact that qualifications have been reduced substantially. Instead of two years of college, a flying training applicant now need only have a high school degree.

Air Force officials were reluctant to drop the standards, but had no alternative. They insist, however, that standards cannot be reduced further.

The Air Force currently has a requirement to graduate 7800 pilots per year. To do this, 13,000 qualified applicants must be processed.

Also needed are 5,000 observers yearly.

The February pilot training quota is 1200, but the Air Force must come up with 4800 prospects to fill the class. Rigid psychological and physical tests are given in order to eliminate those who are seen as potential drop-outs during the flying training.

The availability of ROTC graduates during the months from July to December eases the flying training class quota problem considerably, especially with the recent requirement for flying training in the last two years of the ROTC program.

Air Force authorities say that the recruiting job for aviation cadets is toughest during the months of January, February and March. Then, quotas are highest because applicants from other sources, such as ROTC, are available only in limited numbers.

In addition to normal recruiting service activity, the Air Force is sending aviation cadet selection teams to visit bases to promote interest in flying training.

Commanders are being encouraged to bring the opportunity of flying training to the attention of personnel by interviews, publicity in the base newspapers and by other techniques.

During recent years, Air Force officials have on numerous occasions expressed concern over the drop in the number of applications for flying training.

They are also concerned because of continued rise in average age of pilots.

USN-USMC To Ask Liquor Sales OK

Authority to continue package liquor sales beyond 1 April may be requested for a number of Naval installations and for all major Marine Corps bases in the continental United States.

As a result of the new Defense Department liquor directive, both Services stand to lose package sale privileges which they have held for many years. These sales, spokesmen said, have helped to build and maintain much-needed officer's messes at no cost to the taxpayer.

In ruling out the sale of package liquor last week, the Defense Department said the military services may recommend continued sales at "remote locations" where purchase of package liquor "is not feasible due to distance or inadequacy of travel facilities." All such recommendations would have to be approved by the Secretary of Defense.

On the basis of this exception, a Marine Corps spokesman said it is a "reasonable assumption" that General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., will make strong representations to continue package sales at major Marine bases, all of which are located in areas considered "remote."

It is pointed out, for example, that personnel at the Marine Corps Base, Camp Pendleton, Calif., must travel 17 miles just to get to the main exit.

A Navy spokesman said many Naval installations also are far removed from any non-military source of liquor supply, and that recommendations will be made to have certain of these facilities approved for continued package liquor sales.

Meantime, both Services took action this week to implement the new Defense Department directive.

"At Once"

The Navy, in a directive to all stations in the Continental U. S., informed activities at remote locations that they can "request authority to continue package

Senior Army Cols. Face '54 Retirement

Hundreds of senior Army officers—many of them generals—face probable retirement next year as a result of the forthcoming manpower slash.

These are the permanent colonels with 30 years or more service and at least five years in permanent grade who were retained on active duty during the fighting in Korea.

Included in this group of about 450 are approximately 75 temporary general officers, mostly one-star but some in two-star rank.

During the hostilities in Korea, when the Army was forced to call thousands of Reserve officers to active service involuntarily, Pentagon officials and Congressional leaders felt it highly desirable to retain on active duty these veteran Regular Army officers.

As a result, the White House issued an Executive Order authorizing retention on the active list of up to 60 per cent of the permanent colonels otherwise slated for retirement.

Now, the situation is completely reversed. The Army recently has had to release thousands of Reserve officers in (Continued on Back Page)

PAY HIKE AGES

Like 1953, the proposal to raise military pay was getting older and feebler this week.

A Defense Department spokesman said there has been no new Pentagon request to the Budget Bureau for a cost-of-living pay raise O.K. The Womble Report has not changed the picture, it was stated.

In an energetic effort to gain BOB approval, the Defense Department submitted a pay raise suggestion last Spring. But the BOB was not enthused over the plan.

The pay adjustment proposal could be revived in '54, but as '53 ends its chances appear to have been cut down by the economy sickle.

QM Runs Tests Designed To Give Better Fit Shoes

The Army Quartermaster Corps has completed the first step in a program to standardize all shoe lasts and footwear for the Armed Forces.

The standardization is expected to result in better fitting, reduction of sizes carried in stocks, and lower procurement costs. When completed, the program will include about 25 existing footwear types.

As a result of the Quartermaster Corps tests, it has been decided to standardize one single low quarter last and one basic men's dress oxford shoe design. The experiments necessitated the use of a last incorporating a geometrically-graded sizing system, and 10,000 pairs of Army type men's experimental low quarter shoes.

The tests were divided into four phases. A thousand men were fitted by four different teams of shoe-fitters, primarily to establish the desired concept of fit and to train fitting personnel to participation in subsequent test phases.

In the second part of the test, 2,600 men were fitted with experimental shoes after having their feet medically examined and anthropometrically measured. Each test subject was asked to return a questionnaire with his comments after a minimum of 30 days.

Phase three consisted of the issue by regular shoe fitters of 4,000 pairs of experimental shoes in order to ascertain what percentage of a group of inductees could properly be fitted with the new shoe.

The final phase of the testing, yet to be completed, is concerned with a determination of the most efficient sizing system for the newly adopted last and shoe. Approximately 2,500 pairs of experimental shoes in a reduced range of sizes will be regular shoe fitters at an induction center.

The General Staff Committee on National Guard Policy consists of six National Guard members and six members from the Regular Army, all appointed by the Secretary of the Army. The committee makes recommendations to the Army regarding policy on the NG.

"We are gratified to have General McGowan as a member of the committee," Army Secretary Stevens said. "As commanding general of one of the two National Guard armored divisions, with long and diversified military experience, he should be in position to make particularly valuable contributions."

Talent Contest Plans Announced By Army

Army personnel throughout the world who can sing, dance, play musical instruments or in any other way entertain their fellow soldiers may participate during 1954 in the First All-Army Talent Contest.

The Army said preliminary competitions will be completed at Army installations by 1 April 1954.

Major commanders will have completed by 1 May 1954 the selection of one act from among these installation winners to represent their command in the All-Army Final Competition.

This final competition will be conducted by the Department of the Army in the New York City area on or about 1 June 1954, when four final winners will be chosen.

Finalists will then appear as guests on a network television program to perform and be acclaimed as the winners of the First All-Army Talent Contest.

Personnel on active duty with the Army for more than 90 days, may enter the competition, regardless of former amateur or professional standing.

Posthumous Medals of Honor

Medals of Honor were presented 16 Dec. at the Pentagon by Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens to the next of kin of two Army heroes who gave their lives in the Korean fighting.

The presentation ceremonies were held at the Pentagon in the office of the Chief of Staff, General Matthew B. Ridgway.

Soldiers honored, and members of their families who received Medals of Honor in their behalf are:

Cpl. Benito Martinez, 21, a member of Company A, 27th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, whose medal was received by his mother, Mrs. Francisca M. Martinez of Ft. Hancock, Tex.

Pfc. Ralph E. Pomeroy, 22, a member of Company E, 31st Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division, whose medal was presented to his father, George E. Pomeroy, of Quinwood, W. Va. His mother, Mrs. Garnet F. Pomeroy also attended the ceremonies.

Corporal Martinez was given the Nation's highest military decoration for gallantry and courage at Satae-ri, Korea, during a bitter six-hour struggle on 6 Sept. 1952. He singlehandedly defended a vital front line position while under heavy enemy attack.

Pfc. Pomeroy was awarded the Medal of Honor for his single handed repulse of an attack on a strategic UN position near Kumhwa, Korea, on the night of 15 Oct. 1952.

Since the beginning of the Korean action, the Army has announced the award of the Medal of Honor to 67 officers and enlisted men.

GEN. CANNON'S ACE

A veteran golfer, General John K. Cannon, Tactical Air Command chief, scored his first "ace" on Saturday, 19 Dec., when he dropped a No. 4 iron shot into the cup on the 175-yard sixth hole of the Langley AFB, Va., course.

Other members of the foursome included Brig. Gen. Ira D. Snyder, deputy chief of staff, materiel; Col. William H. Councill, programming and commitments chief, and Col. Herbert C. Hartwig, director of maintenance, all of TAC.

He was Judge Advocate of the Army's Air Technical Service Command at Wright Field, O., from June, 1939, until September, 1945, when he became Judge Advocate of the U.S. Army Strategic Air Forces on Guam Island. In September, 1946, he was named Judge Advocate of the Army Forces in the Pacific and the Far East Command, and served in that capacity until he returned to the United States in February, 1949.

Before his appointment as Assistant Judge Advocate General of the Army in January, 1950, General Shaw was a member of the Judicial Council in the Office of The Judge Advocate General from March, 1949.

Regulation Tells Rules For Fund Raising Drives

The Army has issued a new version of AR 910-10, 30 Nov., relating to organization and operations of the Army Emergency Relief, first authorized on 5 Feb. 1952.

Here is what the regulation says in Section V with regard to fund raising:

19. General.—Since Government funds are not appropriated to provide emergency financial assistance to military personnel and their dependents, AER must rely largely on voluntary contributions from members of the Army. It is the long established policy of AER not to solicit contributions from sources outside of the Army, and when such unsolicited contributions are accepted, it is only with the understanding that the name of AER is not to be used in any manner by the donor for any purpose of gain or advantage to the donor or any activities or business with which he is or might be connected.

20. Annual joint fund campaign.—AER is authorized under AR 600-735 to conduct with in the Army an annual fund campaign to seek a small voluntary contribution from every member of the Army once a year. A joint campaign with the Army Relief Society is conducted in order to raise in a single campaign the necessary funds required by both organizations. The purposes of the campaign are twofold, as follows:

a. To raise, with the least possible burden to the Army, sufficient funds to cover the anticipated net annual disbursements for assistance by both organizations.

b. To keep members of the Army informed concerning the emergency financial assistance which they and their dependents may receive from AER and of the assistance which the Army Relief Society renders needy widows and orphans of Regular Army personnel.

21. Conduct of joint campaign.—a. The time and method of conducting the campaign are discretionary with each local higher commander.

b. The campaign may be included in a general fund campaign for a number of other authorized organizations, similar to the Community Chest, but in which case special care will be taken to not overlook the informational phase of the campaign. The campaign has proved to be the best means available for familiarizing active Army personnel with the aims, accomplishments, and capabilities of AER.

c. Funds raised at installations with AER sections will be merged with the local section fund. Funds raised at installations without AER sections will be forwarded to the Director, AER.

d. The Director, AER will compute and transmit each year a proportionate share of the receipts of each fund campaign to the Army Relief Society. The respective shares of the two organizations will be based upon their relative total gross disbursements for assistance during the preceding year, but provided that the share paid to the Army Relief Society will not be less than 10 percent of the fund campaign receipts in the current year.

22. Benefit entertainments, exhibitions, and competitions.—In addition to conducting the active campaign for contributions, benefit entertainments, exhibitions, and competitions may be held at Army installations at appropriate times throughout the year.

Col. Keefe Okinawa I.G.

Col. John Leo Keefe has been assigned Inspector General, Ryukyu Command, replacing Col. James J. Fogarty who has completed his tour on Okinawa and has returned to the U. S. for reassignment.

Colonel Keefe served as Deputy Chief of Staff for KMAG in Korea prior to his assignment on Okinawa.

Take-Home Pay Rises As Tax Rate Drops

Military personnel will receive an approximate 2 per cent boost in take-home pay beginning New Year's Day.

This is a result of the reduction in withholding tax deductions which goes into effect that day.

Maj. Gen. Bickford E. Sawyer, Army Chief of Finance, says that Army Finance will withhold about 18 per cent of pay as compared with 20 per cent this year.

He said the savings will amount to approximately 2 per cent of pay. During fiscal '53, General Sawyer reported, Army Finance officers withheld more than $191 million for Federal income tax.

He gave the following examples of how the tax change will affect persons in uniform:

In 1954 a private with one exemption, drawing $85.80 basic pay, will have $5.50 withheld for income tax. In 1953 it was $6.10.

A corporal, with two exemptions, drawing $122.30 a month, will have $2.00 withheld—which is a little better than the $2.20 in 1953.

A sergeant with three exemptions, whose basic pay is $175.81, will have $1.30 deducted for "Uncle Sam" instead of the $1.50 as in 1953.

A captain with three exemptions, drawing $355.68 per month, will have $34.10 deducted in 1954 as against $37.90 in 1953.

ARMY NURSE Mary B. Cullen has major's insignia of rank pinned on by Col. Seth Gayle, commanding officer of the Army Hospital at Camp Kilmer, N. J., on the occasion of her promotion from the rank of captain. Major Cullen is soon to leave for 27 weeks of schooling at the Medical Field Service School at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

Those to be considered are officers in the promotion zone who reported for extended active duty on or after 1 July 1953, and officers on inactive duty who are not on the inactive status list of the Naval Reserve and who were not considered by the active duty boards which met in November 1953.

AF Med. Service Promotions

The Air Force has released AFM 36-14, which prescribes the procedure for making temporary promotions of medical, dental and veterinary first lieutenants.

To be advanced, the officer must have served a minimum of 20 months on active duty prior to promotion, and on duty with the Air Force a sufficient length of time to have demonstrated qualification for promotion.

HOLIDAY MAIL

The Journal went to press earlier than usual this week because of the holiday and the same schedule will be required next week. As a result, some subscribers may receive their Journal in advance of usual deliveries. Other subscribers, because of the holiday mail rush, may experience slight delays, as are inevitable at this time of the year.

Services Ready Annuity Rules, Official Fact Sheet Released

The Uniformed Services will release shortly official regulations implementing provisions of the Servicemen's Annuity Plan for persons on active duty.

This will fully implement the Uniformed Services Contingency Option Act of 1953.

Retired personnel already are making selections as to whether or not they want part of their pay deducted in order to provide an annuity for survivors.

The Services report that payments already are being made under USCOA, which went into effect on 1 Nov.

Persons on the retired list have until 30 April 1954 to decide whether or not they desire to participate, and if so under which of four plans.

Similarly, those on active duty who have completed 18 years service must make their decision by 30 April.

For persons on active duty, regulations will be sent to the field momentarily. For those on the retired lists, applications have long since been sent out by the Services.

The Defense Department has just released a pamphlet giving details of the Survivor Benefits plan. It is published in complete text beginning on page 503.

MIG Offer Paid Off

Maj. Gen. Glenn O. Barcus, USAF, vice commander of Air Training Command, says the offer of General Mark Clark, USA-Ret., former Far East Commander, to pay $100,000 for the safe deliverance of a Communist MiG, "completely demoralized the enemy's operations."

Following the broadcast of the reward offer, General Barcus relates, the Reds grounded all their planes for 10 days. When flight operations were resumed, the Communists during the next seven weeks lost 131 planes as compared to one American aircraft shot down.

Addressing the OCS graduating class recently at Lackland AFB, San Antonio, Tex., General Barcus asserted that air security is dependent not upon defense, but upon a deterrent force and a readiness force.

"We cannot hope to stop all aggressor planes," he emphasized, "but we hope to stop three times as many as in WW II."

Others who participated in the graduation ceremonies were Brig. Gen. Wycliffe E. Steele, commander of Lackland AFB; Col. Cecil E. Combs, commandant of the USAF Military Schools, and Capt. Harold E. Pkummer, OCS adjutant.

Head USNA Brigade

Midshipman Walter S. Anderson is the new Brigade Commander at the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.

Other new officers who will serve during the Winter period are: Deputy Commander—Midshipman Edward S. Kellogg, III; Commander, First Regiment—Midshipman Gaylord B. Ballard; Commander, Second Regiment—Midshipman John W. Crawford; Brigade Operations Officer—Midshipman Ferdinand I. Collins; First Regiment Operations Officer—Midshipman Russel O. Triple Airborne Training At Army Infantry Center

Airborne classes at Ft. Benning, Ga., will be increased to 1,000 men a week beginning in January, tripling the present student roster.

The large classes of 650 more students than the average class during the past year will continue through April. It is expected that during this period some 10,000 new airborne soldiers will be trained as qualified paratroopers, Infantry Center officials said.

The increase is the result of an extra large number of airborne volunteers ordered through The Infantry School by Army Field Forces at Ft. Monroe, Va.

The volunteers will come from units of the XVIII Airborne Corps and the 82d Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, N. C., the 11th Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky., and basic training camps.

In order to train the large number of students expected, more than 100 officers and enlisted men of the 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team at Ft. Benning have been assigned to special duty as cadre and instructors in The Infantry School's Airborne Department.

They will be assigned to all airborne training committees after taking a week's refresher course. Although all the new instructors have qualified as jumpers, refresher training will insure continuance of the high standards maintained by the Airborne Department, officials said.

Official: 31st Inf. Div. Goes To Camp Carson

The 31st Infantry (Dixie) Division will be transferred early next year from Camp Atterbury, Ind., to Camp Carson, Colo., it was announced 18 Dec. by Fifth Army headquarters. The move is scheduled for 3 through 15 Febr.

The shift to Camp Carson was reported in the 12 Dec. issue of THE JOURNAL.

The announcement followed a prolonged study directed by Lt. Gen. William B. Kean, CG of Fifth Army, into all phases of the proposed transfer. This study revealed that a large saving of operational funds could be made at Camp Atterbury and the move would permit a high degree of utilization of Camp Carson, which is especially suitable for divisional training and maneuvers. Camp Carson is about 10 miles from Colorado Springs.

As a further economy measure, Camp Atterbury will be deactivated 31 March 1954, the Army also announced. The non-divisional units will be moved early in March. Only maintenance personnel will be retained there after the closing date.

Japan Agency PIO

Appointment of Lt. Col. Daniel E. Day as Public Information Officer, Japan Procurement Agency, Yokohama, is announced by Col. Edward W. Sawyer, Commanding Officer.

Colonel Day succeeds Lt. Col. William A. Pierce, who will assume duties with the Office of Public Information, Headquarters, Army Forces Far East.

Colonel Day comes to Japan Procurement Agency from the Joint Field Press Censorship Group, Headquarters Far East Command, where he was assigned following service in Korea with the 7th Transportation Major Port.

Formerly Executive, Public Information Office, Korean Communications Zone, Colonel Pierce also served for a time with Headquarters, Korean Civil Assistance Command (KCAC).

I Corps Chemical Officer

Lt. Col. Oliver R. Hertel has been assigned as new chemical officer at I Corps Headquarters in Korea. He replaces Lt. Col. Paul A. Jordan, who rotated to the States.

Reserve I. D. Cards

Changes in regulations pertaining to issuance of identification cards to Army Reservists are announced by the Army.

Under the new policy, identification cards will be issued only on application of the individual after transfer to the Army Reserve. Previously, the cards were made available during processing for release from active duty.

Since the Reserve identification card, DD Form 2A, (Res), will no longer be issued at Transfer Stations or Transfer Points, processing time for individuals returning to civil life will be reduced as well as an annual saving of about $300,000 in Army funds, a Pentagon announcement said.

In order to receive identification cards, Reservists now must apply to the Chief of the Military District in which they reside, or, if on active duty for training, by making application to the installation commander concerned.

airborne training to the constant flow of new graduates who join the Division after earning their wings.

The relatively mild climate at Fort Bragg makes it possible to have year-round field training for units of the Division. The emphasis is first on physical fitness, followed by techniques of parachute jumping until these become routine. The most important training is in practical work or tactical training to include live ammunition. Lecture courses are held to a minimum.

Each training cycle begins with a review of individual training. Then come squad, platoon and company level problems, followed by battalion and regimental exercises. Division-level airborne field exercises complete the cycle. Annually the Division participates in an Army field maneuver.

Certain specialized training such as winter training and jungle warfare cannot be given at Fort Bragg. To overcome this deficiency, selected teams travel to suitable training centers to receive the latest instruction. Where the training is considered sufficiently important to include the whole Division, it moves to the training area.

On Exercise Snowstorm early in 1953 at Camp Drum, N. Y., the Division received intensified cold weather training to include over-snow mobility, cold weather tactics, survival and parachuting.

Varied schools are conducted periodically by the Division. Among these, which give valuable training to many members of the unit, are Air Movement School, Division Jumpmaster School, Officers' Orientation Course, Teletype Operators' Course and others.

Integrated with its own training the Division has given basic training to several thousand troops. It has also assisted annually in the summer training of Reserve and National Guard units.

Included in summer activities is an annual orientation of Cadets from the United States Military Academy.

One of the Division's more important activities since its return to the States was "Exercise Falcon," which was completed in October of this year.

Test Revised TO&E

The exercise, which began on 18 May 1953, was designed to test a proposed revised TO&E for an infantry regiment. One regiment of the Division was converted to the proposed TO&E for the exercise.

It began with individual orientation, worked up through squad, platoon, company, battalion and regimental levels. The exercise culminated with a two-week Division field exercise which ended on 25 October.

Results of the test, which was supervised by the Office of the Chief of Army Field Forces, have not been announced. However, they are being studied by higher staffs at the present time.

Continued emphasis is placed on all aspects of parachute training in the 82d. Troopers constantly receive instruction in correct body positions for jumping, parachute landing falls, emergency procedures and making actual jumps.

Tactical Problems

These jumps are followed by tactical problems on the ground to assure the men maximum training value from every training jump. This enables paratroopers to learn to cope with the problem of assembly and to carry out a mission after they have arrived at their designated drop zone.

The 82d earned the name of America's

Army Navy Air Force Journal 497
26 December 1953

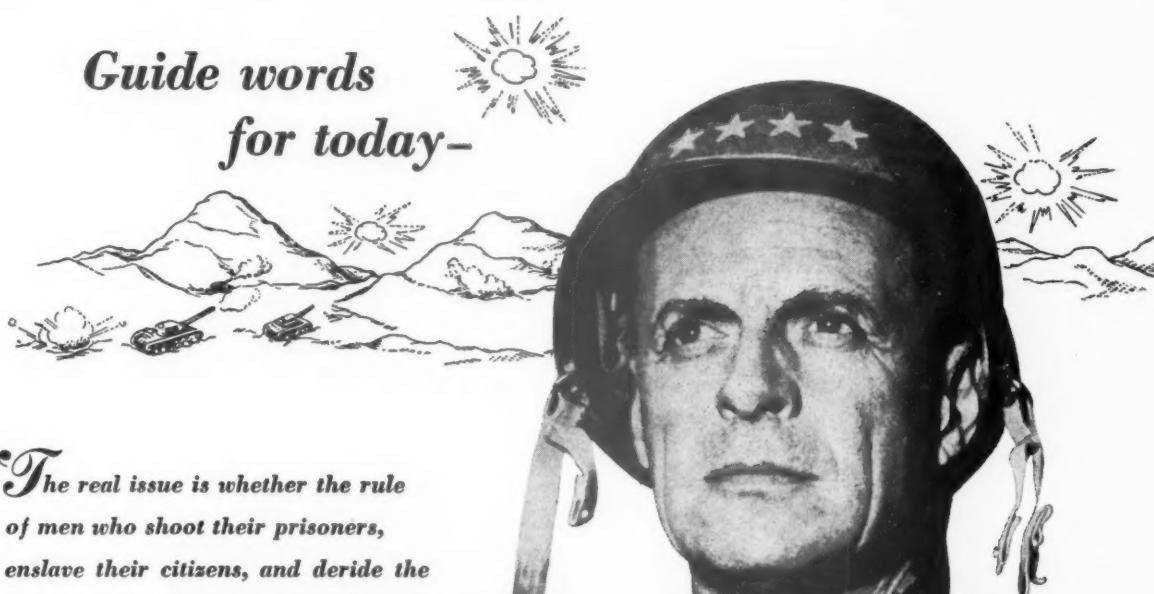

Guard of Honor while serving in the American Zone of Berlin after World War II. It still is in demand for honor guards.

Contingents of the Division constantly are marching in parades, large and small, in various parts of the nation. They represent the United States Army in the highest manner.

The men of the Division are trained paratroopers and they represent the strength of the nation. It is through their constant vigilant training that the 82d Airborne Division remains prepared to perform its mission, to be ready to fight "anything, anywhere, anytime."

"The real issue is whether the rule of men who shoot their prisoners, enslave their citizens, and deride the dignity of man, shall displace the rule of those to whom the individual and his individual rights are sacred; whether we are to survive with God's hand to guide and lead us, or to perish in the dead existence of a Godless world."

Navy Drafts Criteria For Involuntary Recall

The Navy this week listed the principles which it will use in any future war or national emergency to establish priorities for the involuntary recall of Ready Reservists.

A directive signed by Vice Adm. James L. Holloway, Jr., Chief of Personnel, and approved by Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air James H. Smith, Jr., notes that "appropriate consideration" will be given "to the duration and nature of previous service, to excessive family hardship, and to critical employment in essential industry."

In Inverse Order

Where military requirements permit, recall of Ready Reservists will be in inverse order of the following categories:

1—Those who served on active duty for 12 months or more between 7 Dec. '41 and 2 Sept. '45 in one of the military services (including Coast Guard and Public Health Service) or in the military forces of one of our WWII allies prior to 2 Sept. '45.

2—Those who earned a combat decoration in the Korean campaign, or who served on active duty for 12 months or more subsequent to 25 June '50 in one of the armed services (including CG and PHS), and earned eligibility for the Korean Service Medal with at least one engagement star.

FRA Convention Set

The 1954 National Convention of the Fleet Reserve Association will be held in San Diego, Calif., during the period 25-28 Oct., with the nine branches of San Diego County and their auxiliaries acting as hosts.

General Chairman of the Convention Committee will be W. H. O'Dell of Branch 9. Other officers of the Committee are: Co-Chairman H. P. Meyers; Secretary, A.

3—Those who served on active duty for 17 months or more subsequent to 25 June '50 in one of the armed services (including CG and PHS).

4—Those who served on active duty for less than 12 months subsequent to 25 June '50 in one of the armed services (including CG and PHS), but earned eligibility for the Korean Service Medal with at least one engagement star.

5—Those who are not in any of the above categories.

Non-Recall

The Navy said ready reservists who will not be recalled include enlisted members with more than three dependents (limited to those defined in section 102(g) of the Career Compensation Act).

Involuntary recall or delay for officers of the Ready Reserve will be determined on the individual merits of each case. The Navy said "Consideration will be given to special circumstances attendant to dependency status which do, in fact, create extreme personal hardship."

Nonrecall for occupational reasons "will carefully weigh the reservist's critical employment in essential industry against the need for his special qualifications in the Armed Forces, according to criteria established by the Secretary of Defense."

Marine Proficiency Marks

Marine Corps commanding officers have been notified that they cannot delegate to others the responsibility for assigning conduct and proficiency marks.

A recent memorandum from Lt. Gen. G. C. Thomas, Chief of Staff of the Marine Corps, notes that varied interpretations of existing regulations has led some Marine CO's to assign responsibility for such marks to other officers. "The assignment of conduct and proficiency marks is a function of command," General Thomas states, "which must not be delegated."

He said, "Hereafter, all conduct and proficiency marks will be assigned and authenticated by the Marine's commanding officer at the company, battery, detachment, or comparable level."

Navy League Urges Pay Boost, Carrier-A-Year

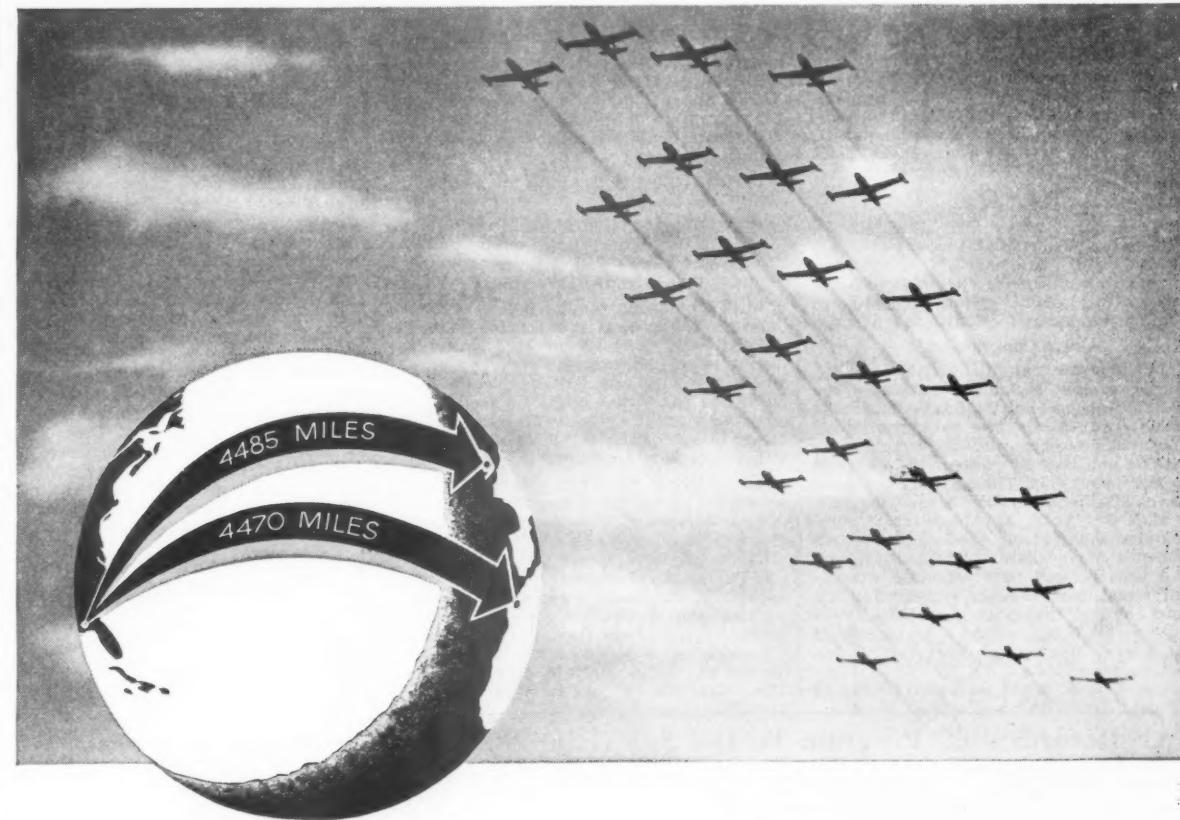

Increased pay for members of the Armed Forces, continued construction of at least one Forrestal-class carrier each year, and retention of three combat-ready Marine division and air wings have been asked in resolutions passed by the Navy League at its annual convention.

In advocating increased pay for members of the Armed Forces, the League's Resolutions Committee pointed out that members of the military establishment have had only three pay increases since 1908.

The resolution stated that failure to attract and hold desirable personnel is due to lack of good pay and "is a threat to the future defense of the country." In asking for the increase in compensation, the League also opposed further limitation on the fringe benefits.

Regarding current manpower cutbacks planned for fiscal '55, the League said it is against arbitrary percentage cuts imposed on the Services by the Department of Defense.

Longest nonstop Jet fighter flights

Colonel Dave Schilling's 31st Strategic Fighter Wing and the 508th Strategic Fighter Wing commanded by Colonel Cy Wilson have each set another American airpower record.

The 31st made their mass jet flight across the central Atlantic—4,470 miles over water from Turner Air Force Base in Georgia to Nouasseur, French Morocco.

The 508th flew 4,485 miles nonstop from Turner to Lakenheath, England—the longest transoceanic nonstop jet fighter flight ever made.

As in earlier record-breaking mass refueling flights, both wings flew Allison-powered Republic F-84G Thunderjets. The 508th was in the air 11 hours and 20 minutes; the 31st landed after 10 hours and 21 minutes.

Many Air Force men—crew chiefs, pilots, mechanics—helped write this U. S. jet fighter power record in the books. Their efforts, backed up by Allison's engineering, design and production skill, have scored another Allison power record in the air.

Vice President's Trip Cited As One of MATS' Longest

One of the longest single trips in the history of the Military Air Transport Service was lodged by the MATS plane and crew which flew Vice President Richard M. Nixon on his goodwill mission to foreign countries, according to Lt. Gen. Joseph Smith, MATS Commander.

The MATS C-121 (Lockheed Constellation) transport plane flew Vice President Nixon and his party a total of 39,544 miles—a distance of more than 1½ times around the world. Total flying time logged was 169 hours during the 70-day mission to 19 countries and several stopovers at Pacific and Atlantic ocean bases.

Crew Congratulated

At the conclusion of the historic flight, Vice President Nixon congratulated the MATS crew on a job well done. The same crew of two pilots, two engineers, radio operator, navigator, two flight traffic specialists and two air police were assigned to the entire trip. The men are assigned to the MATS 1254th Air Transport Group.

Maj. George P. Martin, aircraft commander, said no time was lost on the trip because of mechanical difficulties, and the prearranged time schedule was always met. Maintenance support for the four-engined transport plane was available at all times within a maximum of 48 hours' flight time from the United States, he added.

The longest flight on the trip was 11 hours and 50 minutes required to span 2,850 miles between Canton Island and Wellington, New Zealand. The shortest flight from Taipie to Hsinchu, Formosa, a distance of 50 miles, took only a few minutes.

Of the 169 hours flown on the goodwill mission by the MATS plane and crew, approximately 40 hours were flown at night. Twenty-five hours of instrument time were flown.

Four Months' Planning

MATS planning for the 6 Oct.-14 Dec. mission began four months before the takeoff date. The 1254th Air Transport Group engaged in an intensive review and investigation of all main airfields and alternate bases that might be used. Also checked carefully in advance were servicing, maintenance, communications and other necessary facilities.

In addition to Major Martin, other members of the plane's crew were Maj. Edgar J. Becker, first pilot; Capt. John Stastny, navigator; M/Sgt. Francis J. Shallow, radio operator; M/Sgt. Harry W. Payne, flight engineer; M/Sgt. Ellsworth W. Erickson, flight engineer; T/Sgt. Ramond W. Cambre, flight traffic specialist; S/Sgt. John H. Kelly, flight traffic specialist; S/Sgt. Frank E. Clarke, air police, and S/Sgt. Mark Markovic, air police.

To Use Subjective System

its Directorate of Supply as a pilot model for the new filing system last September.

Upon review of ConAC's progress in formulating new filing procedures, USAF's Records Management Office gave ConAC the green light the following month for a headquarters-wide changeover to the new system.

The new Air Force Subjective File System will soon be in effect throughout the Air Force.

Gen. Glantzberg To Europe

Commanding officer of the 4th Air Division at Barksdale AFB, La., since last January, Maj. Gen. Frederic E. Glantzberg will leave Washington 1 Feb. to command the 17th Air Force in Europe.

In 1952, General Glantzberg commanded Air Task Group 1324 atomic weapons tests at Eniwetok.

Ruling Limits Travel Allowances For Air Reservists-ANG

The Comptroller General has ruled that officers and airmen of the Air Force Reserve or Air National Guard who are permanently retired for any reason such as length of service, age or physical disability only are entitled to travel allowances and transportation of household goods and dependents from last duty station to home of record or place from which ordered to active duty, as they may elect.

This decision has the effect of rendering illegal and ineffective the pertinent provisions of the Joint Travel Regulations, such as Paragraph 1150-3, which have heretofore permitted members of the reserve components to select their home upon permanent retirement from service.

The Secretary of Defense, Air Force officials said, will submit a request to the Comptroller General for reconsideration of this decision and in anticipation that this decision might be reversed, no action will be taken to amend the JTR's at this time.

Effective immediately, Finance and Transportation Officers will discontinue payment of allowances and furnishing of transportation of dependents and household goods to home of selection except in the case of those officers and airmen of the regular Air Force who are permanently retired.

The Air Force said this limitation is equally applicable to any member who has been heretofore retired except that no action will be taken at this time to seek collection for allowances heretofore paid or transportation heretofore furnished in contradiction of this decision pending final resolution of this matter with the Comptroller General.

"Class Q and You" Data Set For AF Distribution

A pamphlet titled "Class Q and You" will be distributed in late December to all airmen, it is announced by Brig. Gen. Richard L. Scott, Commander of the Air Force Finance Center, Denver, Colo.

The pamphlet, which furnishes general information on the Class Q dependents' allotment program, will also be given to future airmen who enter on active duty at Sampson and Lackland AF Bases. Distribution to airmen now on duty will be made through the major air commands, it was announced.

Purpose of the "Class Q and You" pamphlet, according to General Scott, is to clarify many of the questions regarding dependents' support of their families, and airmen receiving copies of the pamphlet are urged to see that their dependents have an opportunity to read the provisions of the Class Q allotment program which was established under the Dependents Assistance Act of 1950. Publication of this pamphlet is expected to reduce the volume of inquiries directed to Finance Officers and the Air Force Finance Center.

However, both airmen and dependents are cautioned that this pamphlet was written in broad, easy-to-read, non-technical language and, thus, is not intended to cover all the legal and technical aspects of the allotment program. Airmen personnel who have additional questions concerning the Class Q allotment should contact the finance offices at their home stations.

It was pointed out by Headquarters, United States Air Force, that the pamphlet will have only one printing and will not be available in the future through supply channels.

C-119s Operating on New Lift to European Bases

Combat and maintenance supplies for American jet aircraft wings now are being delivered on a routine schedule by Fairchild C-119 Flying Boxcars recently assigned to a new European airlift operated by the 12th Air Force.

Directing the new permanent airlift operation is Lt. Gen. William H. Tunner, commander of U. S. Air Forces in Europe and former chief of the famed Berlin Airlift and the more recent Korean Airlift.

Under the newly initiated airline-type schedule, Flying Boxcars from two American bases in Germany pick up and deliver supplies to and from depots in France, Germany, England, and Africa, as well as service the Air Force's network of tactical bases throughout Central Europe.

The European Command's best-qualified transport crews have been assigned to the C-119's of the "Tunner Air Line," according to Lt. Col. Adam A. Reaver, operations officer for the Neuburg-based 317th Troop Carrier Group which is participating in the lift.

The load-carrying capacity is expected to exceed 200,000 pounds daily, and planes assigned probably will fly an aggregate time of more than 1,000 hours per month.

Assigned to Air Univ.

Lt. Col. William W. Robertson recently was assigned as Materiel Staff Officer for the 3800th Air University Wing at Maxwell AFB, Ala. He replaces Capt. Edward S. Modica, who will serve as assistant Materiel Staff Officer.

Prior to his assignment on Maxwell, Colonel Robertson served in the Materiel Section of Headquarters Command, USAF, Washington, D. C., as Director of Installations.

Guard Pilot Seeks Record To Kick Off New Drive

Col. Willard W. Millikan, Commander of the District of Columbia's 113th Air National Guard Fighter-Bomber Wing, will attempt to break the Los Angeles-New York speed record early in January, Maj. Gen. Edgar C. Erickson, Chief of the National Guard Bureau, has announced.

Colonel Millikan's flight will be the signal for the start of a nationwide Air Guard recruiting drive for 11,000 new members.

Colonel Millikan, an ace in WW II, plans to fly an F-86 Sabrejet from Los Angeles International Airport to Mitchell AFB, L. I., with one refueling stop at Offutt AFB, Omaha, Nebr. The exact date of the flight will be determined by weather at both Offutt and Mitchell.

The present record of 4 hours and 13 minutes was set in January, 1946, by Col. William Councill in an F-80 Shooting Star.

Tactical Medical Center

Activated At Donaldson

A new center of operations in military medical service, the USAF Tactical Medical Center, has been established at Donaldson AFB, S. C., according to an announcement by the Eighteenth Air Force Commander, Maj. Gen. Robert W. Douglass, Jr.

The Center is the first such activity to be formed in the Air Force.

The mission of the Tactical Medical Center is to study theories and develop medical service techniques for use in Tactical Air Operations. In addition, the Center will organize, equip and train its subordinate forces for aeromedical operations.

The Tactical Medical Center will be the Air Force's primary advisory and development group in the tactical medical field, but it will not be solely an experimental command. It will also participate in joint exercises and maneuvers, as well as conduct service and field tests of tactical medical equipment.

Another function of the Medical Center is to participate in disaster relief during domestic or military emergencies.

The Center will be directly under Eighteenth Air Force Headquarters, and will be operated by the First Aeromedical Group at Donaldson. Maj. Robert W. Merkle has been named Commandant of the Tactical Medical Center.

Douglas "RADOME"

Problem, in airborne radar, to house instruments in a material which is easy to de-ice. Electro-thermal methods won't do. They affect the radar signal.

Douglas solves the problem with a new material, easy to de-ice. Rods of extruded wax are wrapped in fibre glass tape, impregnated with polyester resin. With multiple layers, Douglas builds the correct aerodynamic shape, then cures the resin at low temperature, and "sets" it under pressure. Next the temperature is raised and the wax melts away, leaving hollow passages through which hot air can be forced. No metal. No electricity. No distorted radar signals.

Discovery of a better way to house radar is further proof of Douglas leadership in aviation. Light, tough Radome expresses a basic Douglas philosophy—further and faster with a bigger payload.

Happy New Year

The Service Man's Family. Career attractiveness settles down to a few fundamentals. Every individual embarking on his life's work has a few basic objectives. Usually, and this is the primary consideration in the Armed Forces, he wants to feel that what he does is worth while; that it contributes to the general welfare and is useful and constructive to his fellow man. Against this personal satisfaction he must balance what his chosen career will offer to the happiness and welfare of his family.

One of the really vital sections of the Womble Report, therefore, is the one labeled, significantly, "Insufficient Provision for Families." It is probable that more commissioned and non-commissioned officers reject or break off from Service careers for family reasons than for any other. The simple fact is that many reach the point where their love of the Service and their longing to pursue a work they like has been over balanced by the penalty they must impose upon their families.

The Womble Report lists three factors under this category—1) Discriminatory and inadequate Survivor Benefits, 2) Inadequate provision for dependent education, and 3) Inadequate family housing. THE JOURNAL believes that "Less medical and dental care," which the Womble Report classifies as "Compensatory benefits," should also be included as an insufficient family provision.

To correct most of the deficiencies represented in these categories will require added appropriations. It is here that the sincerity of the quest for careers "that will attract and retain capable career personnel" will be tested.

The declining availability of medical and dental care for Service Families requires, as the Womble Report points out: a declaration of policy by Congress (establishing a sort of Bill of Rights for Service Family care), a uniform service implementation so that all families may look forward to professional attention whether or not they live on a post, subsidized service from civilian sources when military care is not available, and a budgetary provision to provide for care under all circumstances.

The report of the Moulton Commission urging that this care be extended to all uniformly is now under consideration by the office of Dr. Casberg, Assistant Secretary for Health and Medicine. Favorable recommendation is to be expected there, but the Bureau of the Budget may be a stumbling block unless there are specific directions from the White House. Permanent legislation assuring continuance of traditional family medical care likewise depends upon a nod from the President.

Survivor Benefits will also require positive action. The Contingency Options Act is now law (it costs the Government nothing—being paid for entirely by deductions from pay) but it applies only to those who are retired. There is under study a measure to provide some sort of survivor benefits to personnel who die on active duty. It is likely that this, too, will be planned on the basis of putting the burden of cost on the individual rather than the government. The other project mentioned in the Womble Report is that to equalize benefits instead of the present unbelievable situation whereby the family of a deceased Reserve may draw as high as $525 a month in benefits whereas $75 a month is the maximum for the family of a career Regular.

Dependent education is another point stressed in the Womble Report. Free public schooling has long been considered a right of every American citizen, yet the Congress has abridged this right in so far as it applies to Service personnel by putting a rider on the appropriations bill that no more than $225 a year may be spent on Service children. Because this cost averages about $250 a month, the restrictive rider means that Service families often must make up the deficit out of their own pockets.

The other big factor is family housing, and that is one which will stress budget makers most heavily. There has been great reluctance under both the previous and present administrations to provide any government funds for housing. They seem to think that government help to private housing is sufficient. Yet the Womble Report, as have others before it, repeats what every Service family knows, that is that Wherry-type housing is inadequate in numbers and high in cost. Its greatest benefit has been to families of higher incomes. It has helped, but in doing so has placed

Whiskey No "Fringe Benefit"

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I think the Service should realize that the decision of Mr. Kyes and Dr. Hannah to rescind the short-lived regulation permitting the sale of liquor by the bottle on posts was for the over-all benefit of the Services.

As a matter of good public relations, it is bad to have the Services associated with the sale of intoxicants—even under strict regulations. Had it continued, there is no doubt it would have seriously jeopardized the efforts of the Department of Defense to secure the restoration of our lost fringe benefits. I can clearly foresee that every time a bill would come up in Congress to restore legitimate fringe benefits or to improve Service attractiveness both the sincere "drys," as well as those who just like to snipe at the Services for any cause, would harp on the cut-rate liquor stores operated on Service posts. I wouldn't like to see dependent medical care, post exchanges, commissaries, housing, or the many other factors that would help keep my family happy in the Service, lumped together with convenient and cheap whiskey.

I am certainly a long way from being a "dry" personally, but neither do I believe that the government should be in the whiskey business; nor do I feel that the ability to buy cheap liquor is a fringe benefit to which I and my family are entitled. There are too many important fringe benefits that I don't want jeopardized by such a system.

MAJOR, USA

Ban on Bottled Goods

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The recent "high-level" decisions to ban the sale of bottled alcoholic beverages at military installations has several far-reaching implications, aside from the fact that it illustrates how various pressures exerted by vested interests, by and large, govern this country. It is no secret that the Retail Liquor Dealers Association was largely responsible for the reversal in policy regarding this subject. It seems that their members located near military installations would have suffered financial loss as the military personnel would buy what liquor they desired, on the base at a reduced price.

The argument posed was that the government was in competition with private enterprise regarding the sale of this product. If this be true, then all base motion picture theatres, P.X.'s, and commissaries must be closed immediately. Going one logical step further, we must close all mess halls, as they compete with the a great burden on the families of junior commissioned and non-commissioned grades.

The Womble Report recommends, as THE JOURNAL has frequently urged that there should be annual increments of appropriations for permanent family housing on Service posts. The money thus spent not only helps Service families, but is soon paid back by the return of the quarters allowances forfeited by the families who occupy them. The Wherry-type housing, for which families usually pay more than their quarters allowances, reverts to private ownership when paid for, whereas Government housing continues to serve the Service for many, many years.

What will the Department, which has not yet approved the Womble Report, and the Administration and its Bureau of the Budget do about these vital recommendations for Service families? What will Congress do toward providing these small amounts which mean so much in increased efficiency? Upon the answers to these questions will depend largely the success or failure of the much-heralded movement to improve Service Attractiveness.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—In the past year, the Enemy Equipment Identification Service of the Signal Corps has identified, catalogued and studied more than 10,000 pieces of enemy signal material. The Identification Service has found, for example, that German design was frozen five years ago. Although the freezing made for speed in production it has boomeranged—the Nazis are unable to keep pace, at least in this line, with the rapid-fire technical developments of the United Nations. The majority of Japanese radio sets are handmade of inferior materials—much of the materials having been purchased on U. S. distress markets during the depression.

50 Years Ago—According to figures submitted by the London Times, the naval expenditures of the eight foremost powers were as follows (in fiscal 1903): Great Britain $180,617,000; United States, $81,777,200; France, $62,258,350; Germany, $55,708,800; Russia, $55,339,400; Italy, $23,250,200; Japan, $16,186,400; Austria, $9,103,000.

90 Years Ago—A special order authorizes corps and other independent commanders to grant individual furloughs for 45 days to such men of their respective commands as may have re-enlisted, or having, since the issue of the circular of 17 Dec. 1863, signified their intention to do so, shall at once re-enlist as veteran volunteers, under General Orders from the War Department. When three-fourths of the men of a regiment or company re-enlist, such portion of the regiment or company will be allowed to go home in a body, and take with it its arms and equipments.

local restaurants, especially during off-duty hours.

Judging from the effort put forth by the liquor dealers in regard to this subject it would appear that sales to military personnel are quite high, perhaps higher than usual. Maybe the morale of servicemen has reached such a low level that brief alcoholic episodes are the only means of escape from the continued vacillating policies of "high-level thinkers," and continued whittling away of the so-called "fringe benefits" by Congress.

Those of us committed to the service of the country as a career, view the continued decline in service attractiveness as a "direct order" to get out, and stay out of the military service. Unless a complete reversal in policy regarding the government's responsibility to keep its terms of a contract is soon announced, then the exodus of the "hard core" personnel will result in a "no core" situation.

There are, fortunately, very few of us in the military service who actually need alcoholic beverages, and I am certain that many individuals will join with me in an absolute boycott of all retail liquor dealers within the continental limits of the United States.

Annuity Plan Details Told

THE following is the text of an official Defense Department pamphlet, newly released, which gives details of the Uniformed Services Contingency Option Act of 1953. This is the legislation permitting persons to accept reduced retired pay in order to establish benefits for survivors. The pamphlet was intended for use by commanding officers in advising personnel about the new legislation.

Most of us plan today for tomorrow—and for the years to come.

For one thing, it's only sensible to prepare while we can for our security in later life. For another—we can, through orderly planning, arrange our affairs so that, in event of death, those who depend on us will not suffer unnecessary hardships.

Not long ago, Congress voted and the President signed into law a plan that increased greatly the opportunity for men and women in uniform to prepare for the future. It gives similar opportunities to members of the Reserves, and to former servicemen and women who now are drawing retired pay.

The plan's official title is, "Public Law 239, an Act to permit members of the uniformed Services to elect certain contingency options, and for other purposes." It is also known as the "Uniformed Services Contingency Option Act of 1953."

In simple language, this is what Public Law 239 does:

It gives a member of the uniformed Services the opportunity, on retirement, to accept a reduced amount of his monthly retired pay in order to provide a steady income—called an "annuity"—for his eligible dependents after his death.

The idea behind the plan was put in plain language by Representative Dewey Short, Chairman of the Committee on Armed Services in the House of Representatives, when his committee began public hearings on the proposed law on 21 May 1953.

"I think members of this committee know that when a man retires [from the uniformed Services] today, he draws his retirement pay until he dies, and then it is ended," Congressman Short said. "This legislation makes it possible for all retired personnel to have their choice, or option, of different plans whereby they will draw a reduced retirement pay during their lives . . . and then, after death, the widow and children will not be left out in the cold with absolutely nothing."

The Act went into effect on 1 November 1953.

Nobody has to take part in the plan. It is entirely voluntary.

An Explanation

At this point, it should be explained that Public Law 239 laid down the basic rules of the plan. However, solving all the problems involved in administering such law is a painstaking matter. As soon as the Act was signed into law by President Eisenhower on 8 August 1953, committees representing the various Government departments involved began the work of writing regulations, interpreting Congress's intent, and so forth.

This FACT SHEET is not complete in all respects. Moreover, it does not constitute an official directive, and is not binding on the military departments. But its purpose is to give you as much information as is available at this time. More information will be provided through regular military channels and military newspapers as it becomes available.

Who Can Participate?

Who is eligible to participate in this annuity plan?

Broadly speaking—

Anybody who is now, or expects in the future to be, drawing retired pay from any of the uniformed Services.

The term "uniformed Services" means the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the Public Health Service.

Men and women in the Reserve components, whether serving on extended active duty or not, are eligible. Persons who are drawing Reserve retired pay are eligible. Also eligible are men and women who are not in the Reserve but who have completed 20 years' "Service for pay purposes."

*Service for pay purposes generally means either active duty or duty in a Reserve component.

How Does the Plan Work?

First, you should know which persons are eligible to be your "annuitants"—meaning those who will receive the monthly payments in event of your death.

Persons eligible to receive the annuities you establish are:

1. Your wife at the date of your retirement, provided she is your lawful widow at the time of death.

2. Your children, born and living at the date of your retirement.

It's important to understand these stipulations.

Note, for example, that dependent parents are not eligible.

Note, too, that should a retired person become divorced and later remarry, his second wife would not be eligible for the annuity.

Also, if a retired person's wife died and he

France's Uncertain Position—

COMMENT ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

CHRISTMAS jollity still reigns in many households, but not necessarily in the dwellings of those who plan our European diplomacy. There is not a plan for 1954 which does not depend in some measure, and usually in large measure, upon France's own planning, plus performance. This has been true for many years, but it appears to be increasingly difficult for some of our statesmen to adjust to the fact, and to be reconciled to the further fact, that under her present governmental system and in a political balance split among six political parties, France finds it extremely difficult to do any long-range planning. The consecutive collapses of one government after another, owing to the crumbling of the coalitions which had originally brought these several governments into existence, gave warning of how difficult it is for even a tactful premier to engage in a strong policy, to which parts of his coalition are opposed. The period last Summer when for weeks no French statesman could assemble even a starting-coalition, so that an international conference had to be postponed in order to have responsible French representation, now has been followed by a prolonged delay in agreeing upon a President to succeed M. Auriol. There is evidence, mortifying to that great nation, that the present constitutional establishment, theoretically fully representative of independent opinion, is practically devised for halting national action rather than promoting it.

To this day it is uncertain whether France will support the European Defense Community, plus the European Army, which was invented by French statesmen and promptly accepted in principle by almost everyone except those Frenchmen's successors in office. The task of obtaining French acceptance is a large one and a necessary one, but French acceptance will come voluntarily if at all, and the plain fact is that the French parties of the extreme left and the extreme right are both opposed to EDC, although for different reasons. Reason warns that the Communists will not relax their opposition, and experience warns that the Gaullists cannot. Thus a good third of the French parliament is known to be in opposition and a new government must at the very outset seek a coalition on terms so flexible that they will be attractive to much more than a mere majority of the middle-parties' membership. Is that political triumph likelier to be achieved by threats or persuasion? And is the already difficult process to be helped by patience or impatience on the part of foreign nations? Even so doughty and tempestuous a warrior as Sir Winston Churchill decided that patience was better.

AMERICAN AID to western European nations is now (as a result of the Richards amendment) subject to a new condition: half of the aid is to be given through the European Defense Community. With this restriction in effect (and there were a great many Americans who have not yet heard of it) it is apparent that no amount of good will on the part of our administration is going to release American contributions fully, save in the event of EDC ratification. It is unfortunate that this stern but simple fact was not proclaimed earlier; President Eisenhower, sensing the disturbed state of French opinion that had resulted from Secretary Dulles' blunt warnings, responded by giving public reminder of the Richards amendment and its significance. It was a useful reminder, but a belated one, that America has its own difficulties in adjusting to France's troubles. It is important, however, to bear in mind that the western defense is most decidedly dependent upon France, even as France is dependent on the west, and that cooperation is effective only as it is given, not exacted.

RUSSIA'S sober second-thought, which President Eisenhower's patience and understanding led him to anticipate, led Moscow this week to a fairly complete turnaround on the atomic-power issue. Moscow's first impulse brought the usual response of "American war-mongering." A little thought convinced the Kremlin that this was mere stupidity, so complete had been thoughtful nations' reception of the President's epochal speech. This past Monday, accordingly, brought an entirely different formal reply—not an acceptance of the Eisenhower thesis, of course, but a revision of it with emphasis upon the need, not only of facilitating an exchange of atomic-power for peaceful purposes, but of discouraging the use of atomic weapons in war. This idea, it happens, is not a Kremlin invention. American efforts to eliminate war, to reduce its incidence, to control its weapons, have been frequent and continuous. The specific effort to establish a true international control of atomic weapons was initiated by America in the United Nations (by Mr. Bernard Baruch's studied proposal) long ago and was instantly defeated by Russia's refusal to accept the basic principle of accompanying arms inspection. Our experience with Russia is not one to encourage any plans for our unilateral disarmament, and one searches through the Russian note of Tuesday without encountering a syllable to show that Russia in 1953 has abandoned her 1947 opposition to an international-inspection system which would show that every nation, without exception, is abstaining from the making and accumulating of atomic weapons.

MOSCOW agrees to "confidential or diplomatic" negotiations on the subject of international pooling of atomic power. This will do for the present, for it is in effect an acceptance of the Eisenhower thesis that there must be a constructive advance to the whole program of what the world is to do with its newly acquired atomic capabilities. There no longer is any sense in evading the fact. We—and others—have a solid knowledge of what can be done today with atomic fission, for purposes both of destruction and beneficial performance: there is also a widespread knowledge of what can be done, particularly in the realm of destruction, with atomic fusion. The capacity for translating knowledge and raw material into reality is not ours alone. The certainty of that translation need not be argued any longer, and the discussions among nations can therefore be undertaken in a wholly realistic manner. In that limited respect the world is possibly better off than it was in 1947, when there was a great deal of shadow-boxing.

Russia alone can determine whether we are better off in any other respect, for Russia has been the barrier to friendly negotiations about use of the atom and about a great many other things. It would be a wonderful thing to feel that last Monday's note provided its own assurance of Russian cooperation on the atom, or on anything else. It would be a foolish thing to take any such promise for granted on the basis of the note's extremely vague wording. For the present we know only that the Kremlin's original obstructive attitude has been abandoned, and that a somewhat more open attitude exists. So far as it goes, that is favorable. But this is merely an opening gambit; the game is ahead.

MEMO*News And Gossip
For Journal Readers*

THE NEW LOOK won't be complete until something's done about the state of the Reserve Forces. Asst. SecDef Hannah has said repeatedly that an overhaul seems necessary. The Natl. Security Tng. Commission describes as "dangerous" the condition of the Reserve. Defense officials, notably Sec'y Wilson, have stressed that one of the reasons active duty forces can be cut is because of the size of the Reserve, which numbers over 2 million men. But only a small percentage are participating in active Reserve units; for example, 96 out of every 100 Korean veterans with a legal Ready Reserve obligation are not serving with units.

ACTION TO BOLSTER RESERVE units cannot be long delayed, unless regulations are amended. The Army has on the books a requirement that Reserve units must attain 50 per cent officer and cadre strength nine months from date of activation, with units organized before July 1953 given until 31 March '54. Inactivation or relocation is scheduled for units who don't make it. Notwithstanding the fact that the Army's 27 Reserve divisions have an authorized enlisted strength of only 3,683 men, all are having trouble meeting this requirement. The NSTC says a survey of 18 of the 27 divisions shows that all but three lost strength in the last year; none achieved authorized strength.

UNLESS SOMETHING'S DONE, Defense leaders will have to confine remarks about the potential support of the Reserve to individual totals—virtually all veterans—rather than to availability of organized and trained "combat ready" units.

IF NEW ECONOMY CUTS should mean additional officer force-outs, the Reserve organizations are certain to issue a new blast concerning the failure of the Defense Dept. to implement provisions of the Armed Forces Reserve Act authorizing contract tours with severance pay provisions. The Budget Bureau has twice rejected Pentagon proposals. Defense leaders are hopeful they can avoid any new forced attrition program, but such action must be considered a definite possibility in view of the cuts confronting the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

EVERYTHING POSSIBLE will be done to continue stabilized tours of at least 18 months for Army EM returning from o'seas. Much will depend, of course, on the deployment of U. S. forces. If concurrently with manpower reductions, o'seas strength is reduced, the problem will be eased. If, however, o'seas strength remains at or close to present levels at the same time that draft calls drop and overall strength is cut, the Army will be hard put to maintain the 18-month guaranteed tour. The assurance of increased opportunity for stabilized assignments is seen by Army authorities as essential to securing and maintaining a satisfactory re-up rate.

AN INDICATION of the level-off spending for defense is found in the budget message sent to Congress almost exactly a year ago. The Truman Administration forecast then that Armed Forces spending would level in the neighborhood of $35 to $40 billion annually. But this forecast was made on a force level higher than that which will be maintained under the New Look. The current fiscal year spending is put at $43 billion per year by Defense officials, at $41.7 billion by Budget Bureau experts.

AN ROTC POLICY CHANGE may be linked to revisions in military strength. The Army, like the Air Force last June, is going to find itself with many thousands of new second lieutenants it will not need for two-year tours under new manpower ceilings. One possibility would be to defer or give abbreviated active duty tours to some of these officers and require them, instead, to serve with active reserve units—the original concept of the ROTC program. Another possibility, as the Air Force will do, is to bring some of the ROTC graduates on active duty in enlisted ranks. Anything less than a two-year active duty tour would, of course, have the opposition of Selective Service, which permitted deferment for completion of college studies. In any event, the ROTC seems certain to be cutback in the next several years.

A LOGICAL RESULT of the reduction in Army strength would be elimination, voluntarily or involuntarily, of thousands of Category Four personnel, men in the lowest mental brackets, who have completed at least 21 months active service. The Journal has pointed out that the Army has many thousands of these men in excess of jobs which they can fill. It has been stated that manpower could be saved and efficiency and economy increased if the Army could reduce its Category Four ranks. The manpower cutbacks obviously provide an excellent opportunity for such action. The Defense Dept. recently O.K.'d similar action by the Air Force and can reasonably be expected to give the Army the go-ahead for forced attrition in the enlisted ranks in cases where men cannot serve satisfactorily because of lack of mental qualifications and where they have met Selective Service obligations.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER, with his long Pentagon experience, will frown upon any semblance of inter-Service bickering in working out the manning and funding of the New Look. He spoke out strongly against rivalry in the Uniformed Services during his election campaign. Anything like the B-36 squabble is seen as out of the question. Instead, the White House will make every effort to keep differences of viewpoint within the family. At the same time, Service leaders will still want to get the story of their particular arm across to the public; varying points of view are inevitable. This means that Defense Department speech writers are going to have a delicate job on their hands in the months to come, both in communicating defense programs and needs to the public and to the personnel of the individual Services. An important factor at this time is the wide recognition in all branches of the Armed Forces that the civilian secretaries are men of strong conviction, who will fight hard for what they consider to be essential and who will make sure that loyalty operates as a two-way street, down as well as up. In a nutshell: there will be strong argumentation inside the Pentagon, and possibly at the White House level too, but differences of opinion will be kept at a temperate degree during public discussion.

ARMED FORCES DAY opposition is being renewed by the Navy League, which is now on record as opposing use of tax dollars for its observance. The League is striving to restore Navy Day to its former stature.

few students pursue the study of mathematics beyond arithmetic in our schools today. He said that the ladies of the D.A.R. and other public minded citizens interested in freedom could improve this situation by assisting in creating more interest in mathematics among present day students.

Invest $6508, Save $450,721, Is 3d Army Tally

HEADQUARTERS THIRD ARMY, FT. McPHERSON, GA. By investing $6,508 during the first nine months of 1953 in an awards program for work improvement suggestions, the Third Army will save an estimated $450,721 in one year, representing a neat 700 per cent return per dollar awarded.

This information is released from Third Army Headquarters by Lt. Gen. A. R. Bolling, CG.

Army civilian employees are stimulated to develop new methods to increase efficiency and save time, money and material, through this type of awards program. Awards are calculated as a percentage of the total amount of money saved by the suggestion, if it is adopted.

Winning suggestions in the Third Army area ranged from a mechanical chemical mixing process developed by A. E. McPhaul, a civilian employee at Camp Rucker, that saved the Army $8,680 at that camp alone, to the use of window envelopes in mailing orders to Army Reservists that saved $300 in typing time.

Typical of the larger economy suggestions were the tents designed by William Molan and LeRoy Bates of Ft. McClellan, Ala., to be used in erecting and dismantling tents. This idea has been adopted by engineers for use throughout the Army Area, saving an inestimable amount in labor, tent damage and exasperation of GI tent-raisers.

So far this year 680 suggestions have been turned in by both military and civilian personnel. Of these, 218 have been adopted. Civilian winners reap cash benefits, while military personnel receive commendations, promotions and furloughs for their efforts. Committees at each Army installation receive and evaluate all suggestions that come in. Meritorious proposals are forwarded to the Third Army Headquarters where they are evaluated again on the basis of Army-wide practicability. Winning suggestions are recommended to the Commanding General for Third Army awards, and then sent to the Defense Department in Washington, where they are judged for national honors.

This process allows the biggest moneysavers to be made available to military establishments all over the country, thus increasing the overall military economy program.

SELFRIFFE AFB, MICH. Col. Raymond D. Robison, Tenth Air Force Deputy Chief of Staff for Materiel, was recently presented

Sgt. to Maj. Pipeline Helps "Operation Friendship"

Atlanta General Depot, Ga.—Based on the idea that helping other people out of their troubles helps you forget your own, a "Little Operation Friendship" has been functioning between the Atlanta General Depot and the children of Korea.

With terminals at the depot service club and the 801st Ordnance Battalion near Seoul, the pipeline of gifts is handled, on this end, by MSgt. David J. Evans, of depot Special Services, and in Korea by Maj. H. N. Quin, formerly of the Ordnance Automotive School here.

The pipeline was first thought of when Major Quin went overseas in 1942. The gifts—soaps, pencils, books, toys, canned food and clothing—were donated to Sergeant Evans by various groups in the area, including the Junior Red Cross, the Officers' Wives' Club, the NCO Wives' Club and civic groups from neighboring communities.

After the gifts are wrapped and addressed to Major Quin, the OAS students pay for the postage and are listed on the packages as the senders. Working solely in spare time, Sgt. Evans and "Little Operation Friendship" have netted over 300 packages in the past year.

On the other end, Major Quin reports a tremendous response from the Korean children. In letters to his wife, Hillerie, who lives near the depot in Conley, Ga., he says, "I guess kids are the same all over the world. They run for the toys and then get down on their hands and knees to play with them."

the Legion of Merit decoration by Maj. Gen. R. A. Grussendorf, Tenth Air Force Commander.

The award was presented for: "Exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service to the United States." (Continued on Next Page)

Special Report From Boise Officers' Wives' Club Tells Of 55-Mile Travel Problem and Its Solution

BOISE, IDAHO. (The problem involved for many Service families in living long distances from military bases was a real poser for the wives of Air Force officers assigned to Mt. Home AFB, Idaho. The following special report tells how this problem was licked. —Ed. note.)

The Boise Officers' Wives' Club of Mt. Home AFB, Idaho, wrote a new chapter in history in May, 1953, when the women organized a club in Boise composed of wives of officers stationed at Mt. Home AFB.

The arrival of the 9th Bomb Wing, 15th Air Force, S.A.C., at Mt. Home AFB brought personnel together from Travis AFB, Calif., and the 9th Air Refueling Squadron from Davis-Monthan AFB, Ariz.

This was one of the largest unit moves ever made by the Air Force within the United States and brought a very large group into a new area unable to absorb all the families in the vicinity of the Air Base.

The families were so scattered, in fact, that it was virtually impossible for all to participate in social activities at Mt. Home AFB. There were real and serious reasons for this situation; travel time involved, expense, hesitancy of having both parents away from the city when temporary care had been arranged for the children.

Even the impossibility of having transportation at times, for no commercial means was or is available. About one-half of the personnel had to live in Boise, 55 miles from the Base.

The 55-mile distance made it virtually impossible for members to participate in regular activities at the Base. With the approval of all concerned, the Boise Officers' Wives' Club was sanctioned and was given official recognition.

This was the first time that an Officers' Wives' Club had won recognition as a true and regular club separate from a base but coupled with the base club by having the same honorary president, the senior lady of the Base, the wife of the Wing Commander, Col. William C. Kingsbury.

After six months of endeavor, the club has wholeheartedly won the approval of those immediately benefiting and enjoying the association and friendships that it has made possible and the approval and recognition of the Base Commander, Col. Ancil D. Baker.

The Boise group meeting has afforded the opportunity to members to participate as a group, has made possible a common meeting place, and has held together the personnel who would otherwise have had little opportunity to feel they were still a part of the Air Force. As a morale factor, the club has been of utmost importance.

The Elks' Club in Boise had splendid facilities for luncheon meetings, card parties, or larger functions and extended their facilities in a very cooperative manner. Arrangements were made for two regular meetings each month. Extra reservations were made available at all meetings to wives who lived at Mt. Home or on the base, if and when they were able to spend a day in Boise and join us in our activities.

In fact, each wife really belongs to both clubs, for all activities of both clubs are open to them. It is their privilege to take an active part in all meetings if time and distance does not prevent it.

First group of officers were:

Mrs. William C. Kingsbury, Honorary President; Mrs. C. W. Gilkes, President; Mrs. Gilbert S. Dunn, 1st Vice President; Mrs. Robert Cherry, 2d Vice President; Mrs. James Anderson, Treasurer, and Mrs. C. J. Shusta, Secretary.

Only one change in officers occurred during their six months in office. Mrs. Anderson's term as treasurer was completed by Mrs. R. G. Stout.

The initial issue of "The Tale Spinner," a monthly newsletter, was delivered in June. This monthly paper is sent to all club members to keep them informed on all the high points of activity planned for the month, specific calendar of meetings, and a summation of news for the benefit of those who were unable to attend every meeting.

Starting in July, a third regular meeting was scheduled for a coffee hour the last Wednesday of every month in the lounge of the Y.W.C.A. to honor and introduce newcomers.

Sponsoring new members has been particularly emphasized at all meetings. Arrangements are made for newcomers to be accompanied to their first luncheon, bridge, and breakfast. After that, it is hoped they will be sure to do the same for those newer than themselves. Friendship has been a marked attribute of the group throughout their activities, and every effort has been made to continue.

The group in its first six months has had two activities that may become traditional annual affairs. At the first fall meeting, the officers' wives of the Idaho Military District and members of the Reserve Officers' Ladies' Association of Boise were invited for a fall luncheon and fashion show. The second outstanding activity was to establish a basis for our charitable activities. This was accomplished by having a White Elephant auction.

Club officers are elected each six months, and the new group took office in November. They are:

Mrs. William C. Kingsbury, Honorary President; Mrs. Fred Glover, President; Mrs. R. G. Stout, 1st Vice President; Mrs. E. W. Spencer, 2d Vice-President; Mrs. Steven Yeagle, Secretary, and Mrs. Stanley Botkin, Treasurer.

Defense Dept. Explains Annuity Plan

Four. However, that isn't necessarily so. The reason: those choosing Option Four will have more money deducted each month from their retired pay than will those who do not take that option.

Thus, each person must consider his own financial and personal arrangements before deciding whether to add Option Four to his plan.

You Can Combine Options

Let's look at a rather unusual case: Captain X's wife and child live in different households. He wants each of them to receive a monthly check in event of his death. In that case, he can select both Option One (which provides for annuity payments to the wife) and Option Two (which provides payments for the child). He might also want to include Option Four (which will cancel any further deductions in his monthly retired pay in event both wife and child die before he does). He can have all these options under the law. In this case, no more than the "one-quarter annuity" can be selected for each annuitant, because the total cannot exceed $\frac{1}{2}$ of his reduced retired pay.

When Do You Decide?

If you're like most people, you'll want to think this plan over before you decide what to do. How much time do you have to decide? That depends largely on the number of years you already have been in uniform.

If you are on active duty, or in a Reserve component, you are required to notify the appropriate authorities of your decision before you have completed 18 years of "service for pay purposes."

What about those on active duty, or in the Reserve Components, who already have completed 18 or more years of service? The law allows them to join in the annuity plan. However, these persons—and any who will complete 18 years between now and 30 April 1954—must signify officially by 30 April 1954 that they want to take part.

Persons already drawing retired pay also have until 30 April 1954 to make their preference known.

Here's an important point:

The person who now is drawing retired pay will, if he decides to participate, have deductions made from his pay beginning the first day of the month in which he becomes a participant. BUT—the man or woman on active duty should remember that NO deductions will be made in his or her active duty pay simply because he or she joins in the plan. NO money is taken out of active duty pay. The deductions do not begin until the Service person begins drawing RETIRED pay.

There are some—a very few—cases where a Service person can elect to join in the plan after next April, even if he has completed more than 18 years of duty. For example: a prisoner of war or a person "interned in a neutral country" who is unable to notify the Government that he wants to participate. In such cases, the Service person is given six months from the time he is returned to United States military control in which to make his choice.

Can You Change Your Mind?

It is possible for persons on active duty to alter their annuity arrangements. For instance, Sergeant "Y," who has 16 years of service, sets up a plan whereby his wife will receive $\frac{1}{4}$ of his retired pay and his child also $\frac{1}{4}$ of his retired pay in event of the Sergeant's death after retirement. Three years later, he decides, for one reason or another, to designate the entire annuity for his wife. He can do this. He also can "modify" his plan by changing from one option to another.

As a Service person on active duty, Sergeant "Y" ALSO may revoke (cancel) the entire annuity plan.

But there are three main points to remember in regard to these change-of-mind actions:

FIRST—Any person who revokes the plan is ineligible to participate in it again, for the rest of his life.

SECOND—Any change in options, or cancellation of the plan, by a person on active duty will NOT go into effect if the Service person is retired within five years of the time he makes the change or revokes his plan.

THIRD—A change in the options is not effective until five years after the Service person on active duty has signified that he wants the change (and is not effective at all, of course, if he retires within that five-year period).

Persons already retired (those who have until 30 April 1954 to elect to receive reduced pay and establish the annuities) can never change or revoke their election.

All this doesn't mean that a person on active duty now will have to receive a reduced amount of monthly retired pay, when he retires, even if he has no eligible dependent then. If he has no eligible dependent at that time, he'll draw his full retired pay.

Furthermore, it's not necessary that the man or woman on active duty have an eligible dependent at the time he or she officially joins in the annuity plan. For example: Chief Petty Officer "Z" has 17 years of active service. He's single now, but is planning to get married in the next year or so. He chooses Option Three—which provides for annuities for wife and children—even though he has neither at present. His status as to dependents at the future date when he retires is what will determine how much will be taken from his monthly retired pay. If he doesn't get married, there'll be nothing deducted from that retirement check.

If a person is divorced and remarries before retirement, the second spouse can be covered in the annuity.

What Are the Money Figures?

One of the things that can't be published at this time is a chart or table showing exactly what the annuity plan will cost you, and how much your eligible dependents will receive in event of your death. Here's the reason:

The entire plan is designed to be "actuarially sound." In other words, it will be on a firm, business-like basis, like any sound insurance plan. The Government does not intend to foot the bill for payments to annuitants. (There will be, of course, some advantage to servicemen and women because, unlike a private insurance business, the cost of administering the plan—answering inquiries, mailing the checks, etc.—will not come out of the participants' contributions.)

In order to arrange the program so that it will "pay for itself," the various tables determining the amounts of retired pay deductions and the payments to annuitants have been prepared by a board of actuaries—professional specialists in the statistical field.

This three-man board includes two Government actuaries. The third is a man with considerable actuarial experience in private industry. All were appointed by the President.

The necessary tables will be distributed through military channels and will be available to you.

Meantime, it is possible to explain the METHOD by which Service persons will establish annuities.

The annuities will not be established in flat amounts—but for a fraction of the Service person's reduced retired pay. The wording of Public Law 239 allows the member to establish annuities for one-half, one-fourth or one-eighth of the REDUCED amount of his retired pay. For example:

Colonel "R" chooses a one-half annuity for his wife. When Colonel "R" retires, he draws, let's assume, $400 a month in retired pay. Now, at this point, we'll have to draw an imaginary figure out of the hat, because the actuarial tables aren't completed yet . . . Let's imagine that the tables show the cost of this one-half annuity is 20 per cent of Colonel "R's" retired pay. That would mean that the monthly deduction from his paycheck is $80. Therefore the REDUCED amount of his retired pay is $320.

And his wife, entitled to a one-half annuity, will therefore receive $160 a month after Colonel "R's" death.

That's how the plan works. (But don't forget that the figures used in this example are imaginary figures, not taken from completed actuarial tables.)

About Probabilities

The annuity plan is established along the same lines as sound commercial insurance.

Take auto collision insurance: One policy holder may have two expensive collisions in a 10-year period, which cost his insurance company a total of $2,000. Another policy holder pays the same yearly rate to the same company, but has no accidents in the same 10-year period. By calculating the overall probabilities of collisions involving all drivers, the insurance company has set fair rates which take into account all the odds. Of course, neither of these drivers thought he was going to have a wreck when he took out insurance. It turns out to be very lucky for the two-wreck driver that he had that policy.

Now take the new annuity plan: Both Sergeant "A" and Sergeant "B" are married, but childless. They retire at the same time and participate in the plan. They each, let us assume, have $40 a month deducted from their retired pay. (CAUTION: Remember these figures are pure guesswork, used for example only.)

Sergeant "A" dies a year after retiring. He has paid $480 into the annuity. His wife lives 20 years after that, and draws $80 a month for her lifetime—a total of $19,200.

Sergeant "B" dies after 19 years of retirement. He has paid $9,120 into the annuity fund. His wife dies a year later, after having received a total of $960.

In a sense, Sergeant "A" (or his widow) benefited most from the plan. Like the two-wreck driver, his participation brought a financial return far beyond what he had invested. Still, neither Sergeants "A" and "B" expected it would come out that way. Furthermore—and this is significant—both of these men had the assurance that whenever death should come, their survivors would be protected against unnecessary hardships.

Principle Behind New Law

After it was introduced in Congress by Representative Sterling W. Cole of New York, the bill that eventually became Public Law 239 was endorsed publicly by military and civilian leaders. For several years past, efforts had been made in Congress to secure an annuity plan for Service persons. As Admiral William M. Fechteler, then Chief of Naval Operations, testified at Congressional hearings on Congressman Cole's bill:

"The principle of a contingency option is not new. It is a privilege granted to all Government employees other than the military, and in one form or another is present in nearly all industrial retirement plans."

Mr. Louis Grayson, representing the National Association of Life Underwriters, said for his organization of 55,000 private life insurance underwriters, "We agree in principle with this particular bill. We think it will be a splendid thing for the Services."

The Next Step

As of the date of this FACT SHEET, detailed procedures are being prepared to implement Public Law 239. The Service regulations are expected to be published in December 1953. The Armed Services have sent information and instructions to currently retired personnel.

Persons on active duty and in the Reserve components will receive more information through the regular personnel channels.

Answering Some Questions

Here are some questions and answers that will serve further to acquaint you with the Uniformed Services Contingency Option Act:

Q. Are annuities payable under Public Law 239 in addition to any pensions or other payments to which retired persons' survivors might be entitled?

A. Yes. The Act says: "Annuities payable under this Act shall be in addition to ANY pensions or other payments to which the beneficiaries may now or hereafter be entitled under other provisions of law, and shall NOT be considered income under any law administered by the Veterans Administration."

Q. Will widows and/or children receiving these annuities be required to pay income taxes on the monthly sums they receive?

A. Yes. They probably will be taxed, just as are other annuities.

Q. Are members who retire and waive rights to receive annuity eligible to participate?

A. Yes—provided they make monthly deposits of the amount that would have been withheld if they were drawing retired pay.

Q. Is a widow or child eligible for the annuities if the retired member has chosen to participate, but has not made the prescribed deposits?

A. Yes—provided the amounts in arrears, plus compound interest, are paid first.

Q. Are mentally incompetent retired members covered by the Act?

A. Yes. The Secretary of the military department concerned can make the election for a mentally incompetent retired member on request of the member's husband or wife or child. The member can change the election later if he is found to be mentally sound.

Q. If a participant's children are the beneficiaries, to whom will the monthly annuities be paid?

A. They will be paid to the children or guardian, or will be payable on behalf of the children to the person who has care, custody and control of the children.

Q. It has been stated that a Service person can provide individual annuities for his wife and child or children. What is the maximum annuity he can establish?

A. Provided they are eligible under the definitions of the Act, there is no limit to the number of beneficiaries whom the Service person can designate. However, the maximum amount of money that can be apportioned among all these beneficiaries each month is one-half of the REDUCED amount of the Service person's retired pay. All of his eligible children, no matter how many times he has been married, are covered if he elects Options 2 or 3.

COMPENSATION OR PENSION BENEFITS

It is considered appropriate at this time to furnish certain information concerning Compensation or Pension Benefits for surviving dependents of retired personnel. There are certain requirements as to service of veteran, marriage date of veteran, eligibility of children, etc. The benefits briefed below are administered by the Veterans' Administration, and final determination as to eligibility rests with that agency.

Compensation for Service-Connected Death

Spanish-American War, Philippine Insurrection, Boxer Rebellion, World War I, World War II, or Service During the Korean Conflict Period. The monthly payments in effect at the current time are as follows:

Widow with no child $75
Widow with one child 121*

No widow, one child	67
No widow, two children	94
No widow, three children	122*
One parent	60
Two parents	35*

*Plus $29 for each additional child.
Plus $23 for each additional child.
Each.

Peacetime. All rates are 80 per cent of the wartime rates. Wartime rates are payable in peacetime cases where the death resulted from injury or disease received in line of duty as a direct result of armed conflict or while engaged in extra hazardous service, including such service under conditions simulating war.

Eligibility

The death of the retired veteran must be the result of a disease or an injury incurred in line of duty. Compensation is payable to unremarried widows, unmarried children under the age of eighteen years (with extension to age of twenty-one years if attending school approved by the Veterans' Administration), and dependent parents. Compensation may also be paid after the age of 18 years if the child was permanently incapable of self-support, by reason of physical or mental defect, on the child's 18th birthday.

There is no deadline on the application for compensation. However, awards cannot be effective the day following the date of death unless a claim is filed within 1 year after the retired veteran's death.

Pension for Non-Service-Connected Death

The monthly rates are as follows:

Widow with no child	$48
Widow with one child	60*
No widow, one child	26
No widow, two children	39
No widow, three children	52*

*Plus $7.20 for each additional child.

These rates are not payable to a widow without a minor child or to a minor child whose annual income exceeds $1,400, or to a widow with a child or to a widow with children whose annual income exceeds $2,700.

Eligibility

These rates are payable to unremarried widows and to unmarried children under the age of eighteen (twenty-one years of age if attending a school approved by the Veterans' Administration). Pension may also be paid after the age of 18 years if the child was permanently incapable of self-support by reason of physical or mental defect on the child's 18th birthday.

World War I:

Eligibility is established by service of 90 days or more, or by receiving or by being entitled to receive compensation, pension, or retirement pay for a service-connected disability at the time of death.

World War II:

The retired veteran must have been, at the time of death, receiving or entitled to receive compensation, pension, or retirement pay for a service-connected disability; or, having had service of 90 days or more during World War II must have had at the time of death a definitely ascertainable service-connected disability.

Korean Conflict Period:

Eligibility requirements are the same as World War II.

There is no deadline on the application for pension. However, an award cannot be effective the day following the date of death unless a claim is filed within 1 year after the retired veteran's death.

Note. Summarily, if the death of a retired member is due to his active service, his dependents may have entitlement to compensation with no limit as to the amount of "outside income"; however, if the death of the retired member is in no way connected with his service and if he is (a) a veteran of World War I, or (b) a veteran of World War II, or the Korean conflict and dies with (as distinguished from) a service-connected disability, his dependents (with the exception of his parents) may be entitled to a pension.

Laws governing payment of pensions (as distinguished from compensation) provide that payments will not be made in the case where an "outside income" is in excess of $1,400 for a widow without a minor child or $2,700 for a widow with a minor child or children. In computing this annual income total, proceeds from government-sponsored life insurance policies do not have to be reported. Proceeds from commercial life insurance policies do have to be reported, but if the beneficiary has the right at the time of claim to elect to receive the proceeds in a lump sum, the Veterans' Administration will assume that the proceeds were received in that calendar year, and monthly payments from commercial policies will not be counted toward the prescribed limitations in future years until such time as the income from the policies exceeds the face amount of the policy. This right of election must be available to the beneficiary, but need not be exercised. Qualification of life insurance to accomplish this election may be made by having the following statement

Atomic Weapons May Force Navies To 'Dig In' Under Ocean

Frank Pace, Jr., former Secretary of the Army, told a graduating class of submarine officers at New London, Conn., on 18 Dec. that atomic weapons may force navies of the future to adopt army tactics and "dig in" under the ocean to fight their wars.

Mr. Pace, new executive vice-president of General Dynamics Corporation, makers of atomic submarines and jet aircraft, told graduates of the Navy's Submarine School at the world-famous New London Submarine Base that increasing development of—and more important defense assignments for—the submarine are foreseen in the immediate future.

Citing the pioneering spirit of the Navy in harnessing nuclear energy to drive the "USS Nautilus," scheduled to be launched 21 Jan., he exhorted the graduates to follow the trail-blazing tradition of the Naval service.

Mr. Pace called the "Nautilus" a "platform from which to view a vast new horizon for the design, development, and use of the submarine."

The "Nautilus," the world's first nuclear-propelled vessel, will be launched under the sponsorship of Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower at the Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics shipyard in Groton a few miles south of the Submarine Base on the Thames River.

NISA To Present Bust

The National Security Industrial Association will present a bust of the late James Forrestal to the carrier which is to bear his name. The announcement was made by Mr. C. C. Felton, Vice President of Revere Copper and Brass, Inc., first President of the Association and Chairman of the Committee for the Forrestal Bust.

The bust will be installed on the hangar deck of the USS Forrestal, inbound of the forward deck office at the head of the ceremonial gangway, where it will be readily visible to officers, crew and visitors.

Mr. Felton and the members of his Committee, Mr. John Jay Hopkins, Chairman and President, General Dynamics Corp.; Mr. Austin Kuhns, Vice President, Farrel-Birmingham Co., Inc.; Mr. Earle W. Mills, President, Foster Wheeler Corp.; and Mr. H. C. Ramsey, President, Worthington Corp., have worked with Rear Adm. W. D. Leggett, USN, Chief of the Bureau of Ships, on arrangements for installation of the bust. Details of the presentation ceremony will be announced at a later date.

Mr. Mills and Mr. Ramsey, both members of the Forrestal Committee which is composed of National Security Industrial Association Officers and Trustees, are also members of the Committee on the Organization of the Department of the Navy.

Capt. J. D. Jolley Joins Air Firm as F-89 Test Pilot

Korean jet ace Clifford D. Jolley has joined Northrop Aircraft, Inc., Hawthorne, Calif., as an F-89 test pilot. It was announced by Max Stanley, director of Northrop's flight department.

The 32-year-old ace, while serving as a captain in the U. S. Air Force, knocked down seven MiGs in Korean combat, and is also credited with one probable and five damaged. Just prior to joining the firm, he was on assignment with the Utah Air National Guard. During World War II, Captain Jolley served with the U. S. Air Force from 1942 to 1946.

He will be assigned to the company's Ontario International Airport facility. Captain Jolley is the second Korean jet ace to join Northrop. Robert J. Love, who also shot down seven MiGs, has been an F-89 test pilot and military relations representative for Northrop since mid-1952. They flew together in Korean combat. Captain Jolley is married and has three children.

Get Rid of Excess Stocks Is Theme of New Drive

A coordinated program for the disposal of excess military stocks has been ordered by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson.

Various projects for weeding out surplus materiel currently being carried out by various military departments will be placed under one program supervised by C. S. Thomas, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Supply and Logistics.

Mr. Thomas, who will work out the details of the program with the cooperation of the procurement secretaries of the military departments, asserted that the clogging of military supply systems with unserviceable, obsolete and surplus items was "indefensible."

He pointed out that all items determined surplus to U. S. and allied needs will be eliminated to make the military supply system "more flexible and responsive to the demands of military operations."

Particular emphasis, he said, would be placed on the cross-servicing area of "interdepartmental storage." Cross-servicing refers to the storage and issue by one military department of stocks belonging to another department.

"It is imperative that the military departments determine their requirements and then relate stocks physically held in storage at depots, bases, posts, camps, and stations against those requirements, and determine what should be procured, retained or disposed of," he said.

Elimination of surplus materiel will conserve storage space and thereby reduce carrying charges, Mr. Thomas said.

Fire Control Expert Named

General Electric has announced two appointments in the newly-formed Laboratories Department of its Electronics Division. Homer R. Oldfield, Jr., was named manager of plans and product applications, and Walter Hausz was appointed manager of the Advanced Electronics Center at Cornell University.

Mr. Oldfield served in the Army and Air Force from 1941 to 1945, holding key posts as chief of the electronics section of the Anti-aircraft Artillery Board, and head of the Air Force program for developing airborne fire control radar systems.

From 1945 to 1948, Mr. Hausz specialized in guided missile work, including a visit to Germany at the end of WWII to locate German scientists and information on missiles. He also participated in several test rocket firings at White Sands, N. Mex.

Dedicate CE Museum

Dedication ceremonies officially opening the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers Museum at The Engineer School, Fort Belvoir, Va., were held 16 Dec. with Maj. Gen. Stanley L. Scott, commanding general, The Engineer Center, delivering the principal address.

Included in the museum are documents and correspondence on the origin and early growth of the Corps of Engineers and The Engineer School.

sales beyond 1 April." They were ordered to "Submit full justification to the Chief of Naval Personnel at once."

The Marine Corps also issued instructions placing the new regulations in force and advised Marine commanders that "supplementary instructions" are being prepared.

Both Services ordered compliance with the Defense Directive. The Navy ordered its messes not to make purchases of package liquor "except for bar sales" after the 1 Jan. cutoff date. Stations also were advised that "orderly liquidation of liquor inventories excess to bar requirements will be started immediately and should be accomplished without net financial loss."

Stations asking to be classified as "remote," were directed to comply with instructions to close their package stores "unless specific authorization to continue is granted by the Secretary of the Navy after approval by the Secretary of Defense."

Morale Involved

Both the Navy and Marine Corps are complaining, unofficially, that the new

Army Navy Air Force Journal 519
26 December 1953

order will place too heavy a burden on the cost of operating messes.

In the past, many messes have been operated largely on the profits obtained from package liquor sales. Profits from bar sales, on the other hand, are comparatively small and observers say that when the new restriction hits in full force it can be expected that funds to operate messes will dwindle rapidly, possibly creating a serious morale factor at installations where the privilege is removed.

voluntarily. Further cuts loom.

Consequently, there is strong likelihood that most of these permanent colonels will be retired next year.

However, some probably will be retained on active duty to fill specific billets, particularly among the general officers. Most will either volunteer for retirement or will be placed on the retired list.

This eventuality is seen as probable because of three "Impact" potentials of the budget cuts ahead.

1. Retention of the permanent colonels would result in markedly decreased promotion opportunities at a time when the Army must in any case revise downward previous promotion plans.

2. Failure to retire these senior officers could mean increased likelihood of the force-out of additional officers, younger in age and junior in rank.

3. Beyond this, although final budget figures were not yet set when THE JOURNAL went to press, the presence of these permanent colonels on the active rolls could conceivably require some demotions because of overage in the grade structure. The Army hopes to avoid any demotions as a result of cutbacks.

Should the Army decide the permanent colonels must be retired, every effort will be made to give them ample notification in order to prevent hardships.

In this connection, it is recalled that when the Executive Order was issued permitting the 60 per cent retention many of the permanent colonels who desired retirement agreed to stay on active duty because their experience was held to be essential during the emergency in Korea.

Both the Army and Air Force were given authority to retain 60 per cent of the permanent colonels with 30-and-5. The Air Force, however, has been following the practice of retiring these officers when the specified service and time in grade factors were reached.

A Cat DW10 with No. 10 Scraper spreads earth on the run at the Contra Costa County, California, airport.

One versatile CAT* Engine powers a dozen kinds of equipment

The full line of Caterpillar Diesel Engines includes twelve sizes, up to 500 HP. All of these engines are versatile and a typical example is the D318.

This compact engine supplies dependable power for the Cat D6 Tractor, DW10 Tractor, No. 6 Shovel, No. 12 Motor Grader, D318 Electric Set, Sierra and Domor loaders and Domor snow blower. In addition it powers many leading makes of excavating equipment, compressors, ditchers, rock crushers and pumps. Its marine version is used in work boats and barges.

On big jobs, where such types of equipment are in use, standardization on Caterpillar Engines offers important advantages. Routine maintenance is simplified. Many parts are interchangeable. Operators and mechanics do a better job because they are familiar with the engine.

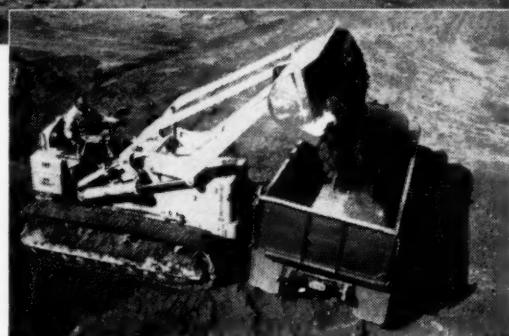

Thoroughly proven in the field, Caterpillar Engines work equally well in the tropics or in arctic cold. All their economy, durability and long life are typical of all Caterpillar products.
